

Make your voice heard!

Earlier this year, Wake County's citizens and leaders participated in the first steps of the 2016 Community Health Needs Assessment. This process helps identify the issues affecting our county, determine resources needed to address these issues, and develop a plan of action to make our county an even better place to live, work and play.

Our research identified physical, behavioral, mental, economic and environmental health, as well as safety and life-long learning as important issues facing Wake County.

It's time for the next step.

Please join us on Tuesday, March 8, to prioritize these issues as a community. Your opinions are vital to ensuring the health and well-being of Wake County over the next three years!
